Massage message readied

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

The message to massage parlors who want to locate in Romulus is more a warning to be cautious. Although the city has no such establishment, members of the city council approved an ordinance to regulate the activities of any such facility.

The ordinance was introduced at an April meeting and has been studied by various city department heads since whose advice was requested before final adoption.

"Cities can be successful in closing down a massage parlor for illegal activity but often it will reopen under a different name or type of establishment," Choate said.

Several surrounding communities were contacted for samples of similar ordinances.

Birthday blast!

It was a wonderful birthday party and the fireworks were only a part of the celebration in Romulus last week. More pictures on page 3-A.

One more time City takes drain commissioner to court

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

"He's at it again," said Romulus Treasurer John Lewkowitz about the lawsuit he recommends members of the city council approve against the Wayne County Drain Commissioner, Charles Youngblood.

"I have found that again the city of Romulus has been over charged by the drain commissioner by approximately $80,000 for the fiscal years of 1982 through 1986," said Lewkowitz.

In 1983, the city of Romulus won a similar lawsuit against Youngblood initiated by Lewkowitz six years earlier. In that instance the Michigan State Supreme Court decided in favor of the city of Romulus and Lewkowitz.

A long court battle ensued and the townships of Brownstown, Huron, Van Buren and the cities of Lincoln Park and Riverview joined forces with the city of Romulus.

At two meetings of the Downriver Community Conference, the latest on June 18, a proposed class action lawsuit against Youngblood was discussed with other communities, including: Inkster, Romulus, Riverview, Huron, Van Buren, Brownstown, Taylor, Woodhaven and Lincoln Park.

"The meetings were organized under the auspices of Commissioners Curt Boller, Milt Mack and William Szore," according to Harry Ellman, the attorney retained in this action.

"Youngblood had collected funds earmarked to clean drains and used them for the operating budget of his office. Our inside research indicates he is doing this again," said Lewkowitz.

"It is our opinion to proceed with another lawsuit. The precedent has been set. Today we are experiencing the same problem, the same argument as before. He is still using drain funds improperly and the State Supreme Court said he was wrong.

"I have walked the drains of Romulus. Taxpayers have registered many complaints that their drains have not been cleaned in years, and they are charged as though the work is done. As far as the city of Romulus is concerned, the commissioner is not doing his job," steamed Lewkowitz.

A retainer fee of $3,000 was approved by members of city council for the services of Ellman.

In the first court battle, the county agreed to an out-of-court settlement which the communities involved split more than $650,000 on a percentage basis.

"Romulus received $146,899 which was used to purchase our own equipment and clean our own drains. It's hard to say how much money we stand to gain from this action," said Lewkowitz.

Eighteen communities are expected to join in the lawsuit slated for Aug. 1.

During the years 1982-6, the city of Romulus paid a grand total of $322,024 into the drain fund. The expected recovery amount is $80,000 for the city of Romulus or 12 percent of what the city paid. The total amount to be recovered from the Drain Commissioner's office for the 18 communities would total $684 million.

Burglars beware!

Neighbors are on the lookout

More than 100 residents from around the city of Romulus attended the meeting of a central city neighborhood last month where they gathered, discussed and implemented a neighborhood watch program.

This month, the fruits of their labor and concern are evidenced around and within the city as 24 Neighborhood Watch signs, specifically designed for Romulus, have been strategically placed.

Eight of those signs surround an area near Five Points regarded as the "old village."

"Most families have been here for years," said Helen Gallien of Olive Street. "This is a good neighborhood and we want to keep it that way. There's been a couple of small incidents but there's never been much trouble. We have always looked out for our neighbors and watched each other's house. That's how we've done it for years," she said.

This neighborhood initiated the renewed interest in the neighborhood watch program which had been dormant for years, according to officer John Smagner, of the Romulus Crime Prevention Unit who helped the concerned neighbors organize.

At the meeting, which included Mayor Beverly McNally and Police Chief Charles Wilmoth, special attention was paid to crime prevention. "Neighborhood Watch is a proven concept that works around the country. This is a people problem," stated Wilmoth.

"And people are definitely enthused. This meeting was initiated by one neighborhood and people came from around the city," said Smagner.

"The meeting increased my safety consciousness," admitted Gallien. "They suggested we notice the neighborhood more. Make sure our doors are locked and utilize good lighting. Be helpful and watchful. I'm meeting people in the neighborhood I never knew. That's the best part."

Jobs generated for area youth

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Margaret LeDuc is looking for a few good teens.

In an effort "to help match kids willing to work with residents who need assistance," LeDuc has begun a referral program in the city.

"Can you cut grass, babysit, wash or paint walls? If you are between the ages of 13 and 16 and live in Romulus, we need you," said LeDuc, director of the Youth Assistance Program in Romulus.

Leduc refers to the program as a clearing house for youth employment. "Wages are worked out between the teenager and the client. Only minimum skills are required and no experience is necessary, but it might help. This program will hook-up kids who have the time with people who need help," she said.

The program will have orientation classes that provide the basic information so teenagers know what to expect with a job. "This program should make kids more aware of what's proper in a working environment. What is expected in terms of dress, conduct and other very simple, basic things. Many kids at this age have not been trained or advised in these matters," said Leduc.

In the fall, this service will be provided through Romulus Senior High School and the Career Transit of the Downriver Community Conference (DCC). Funding was made possible when state grant money was acquired.

Also available with the DCC at this time will be pre-employment testing, resume workshops and a career day attended by local businesses. "Teenagers will have the special opportunity to gain experience in a specific business for just three days. Again, this helps young people develop skills necessary in the workplace," Leduc stated.

"There are no guarantees for jobs but this should generate some activity," Leduc promised.

Further information regarding the summer youth job program is available at 941-8585. This applies to potential customers and any youth between the ages of 13-16.

Mills fouls out!

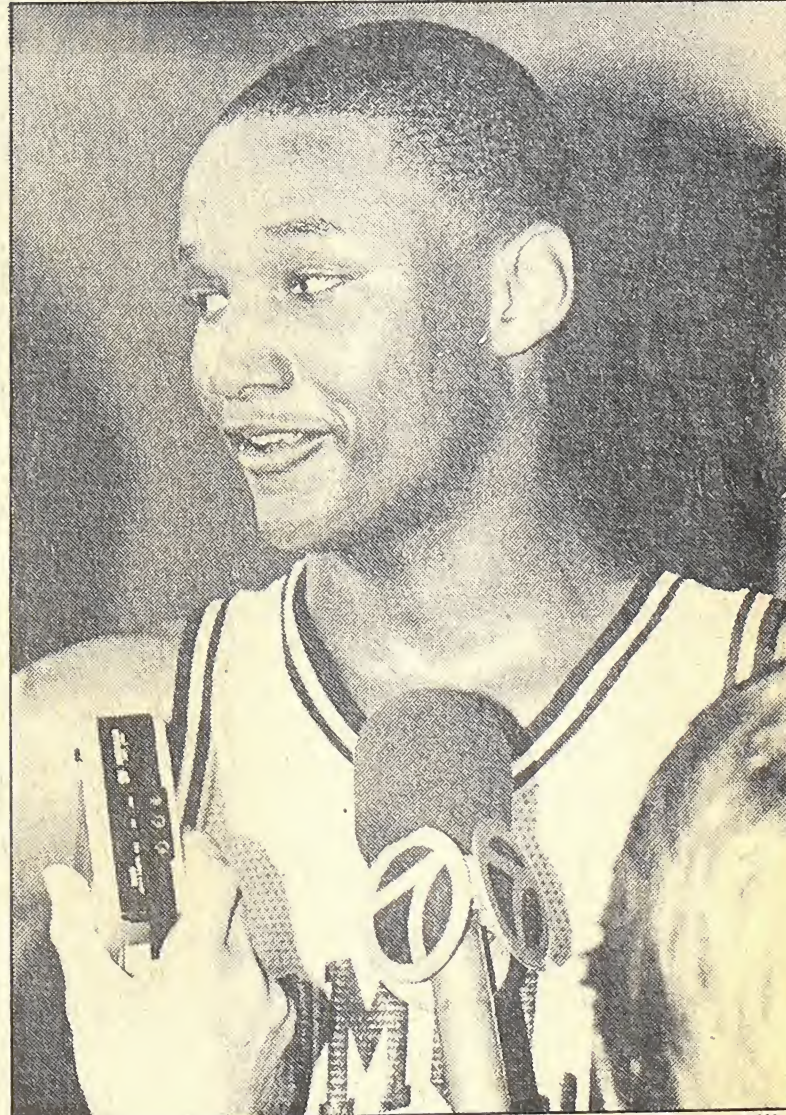

Basketball star fails to make grade requirements

Terry Mills, who led Romulus to its first Class A state basketball championship last April, won't be wearing a University of Michigan basketball uniform this fall.

The 6-9 prep All-American center was ruled academically ineligible this week after failing to pass tests for the second time this year.

Highly-recruited, Mills accepted an athletic scholarship to play for Coach Bill Frieder and the Wolverines, but his debut will be delayed until he makes the new academic standards established by the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Mills will be given another shot at the tests this fall and if he makes the grade he will be able to join the team in January of 1987.

Volunteer firefighter warmly remembered

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

He's seen smoke, fire, broken bones, death and destruction. His emotions have ranged from utter helplessness to the celebration of a victorious and daredevil rescue.

Jim Hollis has experienced all this and more during his 22 year tenure as a volunteer with the Romulus Fire Department. This year, he hangs up his heavy black raincoat and turns in his boots for the very last time as he begins his retirement.

Since his career began on April 1, 1964, he's never received a citation or award. "I've never known any Romulus fireman to receive one," Hollis stated.

This year members of the Romulus City Council officially recognized his "remarkable leadership ability as the Captain Fire Station 2 and his sincere dedication to the city of Romulus. The city enjoys a greatly improved quality of life as a result of its association with James Hollis."

Hollis resigned after job related health problems increased. "My doctor advised me that the smoke was no good for my health," he confessed.

The city and the state have, however, recognized Hollis with several first aid awards. He has received four awards from the University of Michigan for his more than 120 hours of training.

His fire department retirement goal is to, "go back to the station to help the guys any way I can." He says he wants to share his knowledge and years of experience.

And those he has. In the course of duty, he broke his arm after a ladder fell out from underneath him. Just last year, he was overcome by smoke during an evacuation of people from the Ramada Inn.

The most devastating and dramatic blaze Hollis fought was a propane fire on Ecorse Road. "It was a blowing fire with flames shooting 50 to 100 feet in the air." He had to move the equipment across the street for protection. "Channel 7 was there and asked me what I was thinkin'." My thoughts were on the fire. I told them I wasn't thinkin', I was prayin,'" he recalled.

For that same fire, three streets were evacuated.

"Those propane tanks would shoot off into the air like torpedoes. That was 12 years ago and we haven't had another propane fire since," he noted.

"Most of the big fires were industrial, but the lives lost were in residential fires. A trailer burned with two people inside. In the Oakbrook subdivision, a roof fell on an 18-month-old baby and two years ago a 45-year-old man perished in an arson caused fire at Morgan Manor," Hollis recalled. Of his most dangerous fire he stated, "We were fighting a fire at Lincoln Park Engineering. I was on a ladder shooting water inside when something exploded. I was thrown 10 feet. The only thing that saved me was my safety belt. One fireman broke both legs.

"I never thought about the danger until I tried to sleep that night. What if I did this or that? My job is protecting people. Danger never really entered my mind," he said.

Hollis had 12 men working under his supervision. "I would never ask any of my men to do something I wouldn't do. I wouldn't put their lives in danger. The job had a lot of responsibilities," Hollis said.

The 49 year-old Hollis was born in Tennessee. His family later moved to Detroit and then to Romulus in 1960. He joined the army and served as a demolition instructor for the First Ranger Department. He married his Tennessee-born wife, Francis, in 1962. They have two sons, James Jr. and Jerry. For 30 years, Hollis has been employed driving semi-trucks for General Motors Cadillac Plant on Clark Street in Detroit.

He has been involved with the Boy Scouts and little league football and baseball for many years.

"I remember a fire at Pure Oil in Taylor that we assisted with. A Lear jet hit an oil tanker. The fire burned 36 hours. We did not contain it until the next day. Two lives were lost. Over the years, I've seen 'em all," Hollis concluded.

Jim Hollis stands in front of Fire Station #2 on Merriman Road where he volunteered for 22 years.

My job is protecting people.

dan's dogs

These are not reasons to buy a dog:

- To stay in the yard,
- To play with the children,
- To demonstrate how humane we are,
- To play with the children
- To stay in the basement,
- To play with the children.

Some reasons for purchasing a dog are:

- To provide companionship,
- To become a family member,
- To become a working part of the home environment.

A dog is neither a toy nor something to dominate. A dog is a living, feeling being who is happiest when serving his master and becoming an important, useful part of a family structure. Even in the wild, dogs will run in packs, establishing a "family."

Children and dogs have a natural and beautiful attraction to one another. But buying a dog and allowing it to be abused, albeit innocently, is not healthy for dog or child.

Children can be rough on a puppy. Too much roughhousing or wrestling with the pup does more harm than good and later on, when the pup has grown into a dog having the energy and body-weight of a grownup animal, that same wrestling then becomes impossible to control and someone gets hurt - namely the child.

Children are not the only ones guilty of "playing" with the pup. Men are also equally guilty. Again, when the pup's baby teeth have been replaced by adult ones and 20 pounds have expanded to 90 pounds, that original wrestling and roughhousing becomes a dangerous pastime.

Contrary to what many people believe, a dog's place is not the out-of-doors but should always be inside the house. Of course, when you are outside the dog can join you and throwing a ball or frisbie is good exercise for both of you. Keeping the dog outside alone for long periods of time is inhumane. The abuse done by flies, fleas, teasing children and, most of all, loneliness is nothing many humans could endure. Don't ask your pet to endure what you could not.

An untrained dog is not a "guard" dog. A dog trained in protection has learned to evaluate. A lonely, chain-fastened dog left in the yard with no socialization becomes afraid, not protective and may bite anyone who comes near it - usually an innocent, wandering child. Can you afford that liability?

Keep your dog indoors. Socialize it like you teach your youngsters to socialize with other children and adults. Invest in schooling for your pet. Make it a member of your family, a member of which you can be proud.

A taste of the 'salty' life

Belleville couple launch new lifestyle at sea

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Eight years ago, Gil and Sandy Gillespie made an almost weekly trek to the marina on Belleville Lake where the cool of the summer water and sea-like atmosphere would provide suitable rest, relaxation and a chance away from the day-to-day life as an insurance agent and county employee.

Today, however, life as sea-faring folks is seen from a different perspective as the couple have purchased the marina and now live and work on the lake.

"We used to come out here and rent a dock for our boat," explained Sandy Gillespie of Sandy's Marina on the lake. "Then we ended up buying the place."

The Gillespie family abandoned their Westland home eight years ago and took to the waters. After hours of construction in converting an old farm house/hamburger restaurant into a family habitation and building new docks and a new business, the Gillespies now boast of a booming marina business which operates from April to November each year.

How would the change from city life to life at the sea be described? Gillespie summed it up saying it's all "long hours and little sleep." But she loves every minute of it.

With some 200 to 300 fishermen, skiers and leisure boaters converging on the marina each weekend - Mother Nature willing - to have a spot to place their barges into the lake, the marina is hopping from 6 a.m. to near midnight, Gillespie said. Weekdays are generally reserved for the fishermen who remain loyal to their sport in any kind of weather, but weekends are for fun and the multitude of people coming out to the water are sure evidence of it, she said.

The marina owner attributes the increasing rise in popularity of Belleville Lake to the increasingly better supply of fish in the seven and one-half-acre body of water. Although a scare last year from the state Department of Natural Resources closed the lake for a short period for fear of contamination, Gillespie said the cool trickle of liquid is as fresh as any lake and the fishing is great, especially this year.

"Nobody ever talks about (the contamination scare) any more. I think they realized that it was not so, that there was nothing ever wrong with the water," Gillespie said. "The fishing is excellent here. It's one of the better lakes in the state for fishing."

Gillespie reported that the state DNR has been continually replenishing and increasing the stock of fish at the lake making the waters a sure plus for even the most amateur of fisherman. With one or two casts of the rod, up from the waters may come an assortment of bass, perch, bluegill, catfish, walleye or crappie, she said.

But fishing isn't the only sport available on the lake, as skiers and boaters abound each day. Gillespie, who owns both of the public boat launching docks on the lake, reported that most Belleville Lake goers are area residents who own their own boat and enjoy a weekend on the waters to get away from the city life.

Thus, Gillespie and her family have delighted many with their sea-life tales of city boaters who are far from being mates of the sea and have demonstrated their sea-

Boaters urged: 'look up above'

Although boating is sure to top the list of enjoyable and relaxing sports, it also can pose as one of the most hazardous, according to local water enthusiasts and officials from Detroit Edison.

Edison officials have begun an intense campaign urging boaters to "look up above" when launching or moving a boat.

Carla Gribbs, spokesperson for Edison, said recently that stickers and boating safety tips have been distributed to area marinas, boat stores and sheriff's departments. The stickers are intended to be applied to sail boat masts and other large crafts, objects that have been known to knock down electrical and telephone wires and cause injury and death to boaters.

"Basically, contact with the wires could be a fatal mistake," Gribbs said. "It's an identification problem and we are trying to address it."

Edison officials are urging boaters to observe the following three safety precautions when boating, precautions that Gribbs feels could assure that the enjoyable and relaxing boating excursion won't turn into a nightmare.

- Look up above for wires when launching or moving the boat. Gribbs said that electrical and telephone wires are many times located near launch sites or are in the general vicinity.

- Watch that sails or sheet lines do not blow into overhead wires. Gribbs reports that even the small rope that raises that sail is strong enough to lower the electrical line.

- When hauling large boats in the city or in the streets, be sure to lower antennas and flag masts.

Beat the heat by covering up

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

As warmer weather becomes the daily norm and more time in the sun to garden, sightsee, work and play becomes old hat, the dangers of high temperatures and high humidity lurk everywhere.

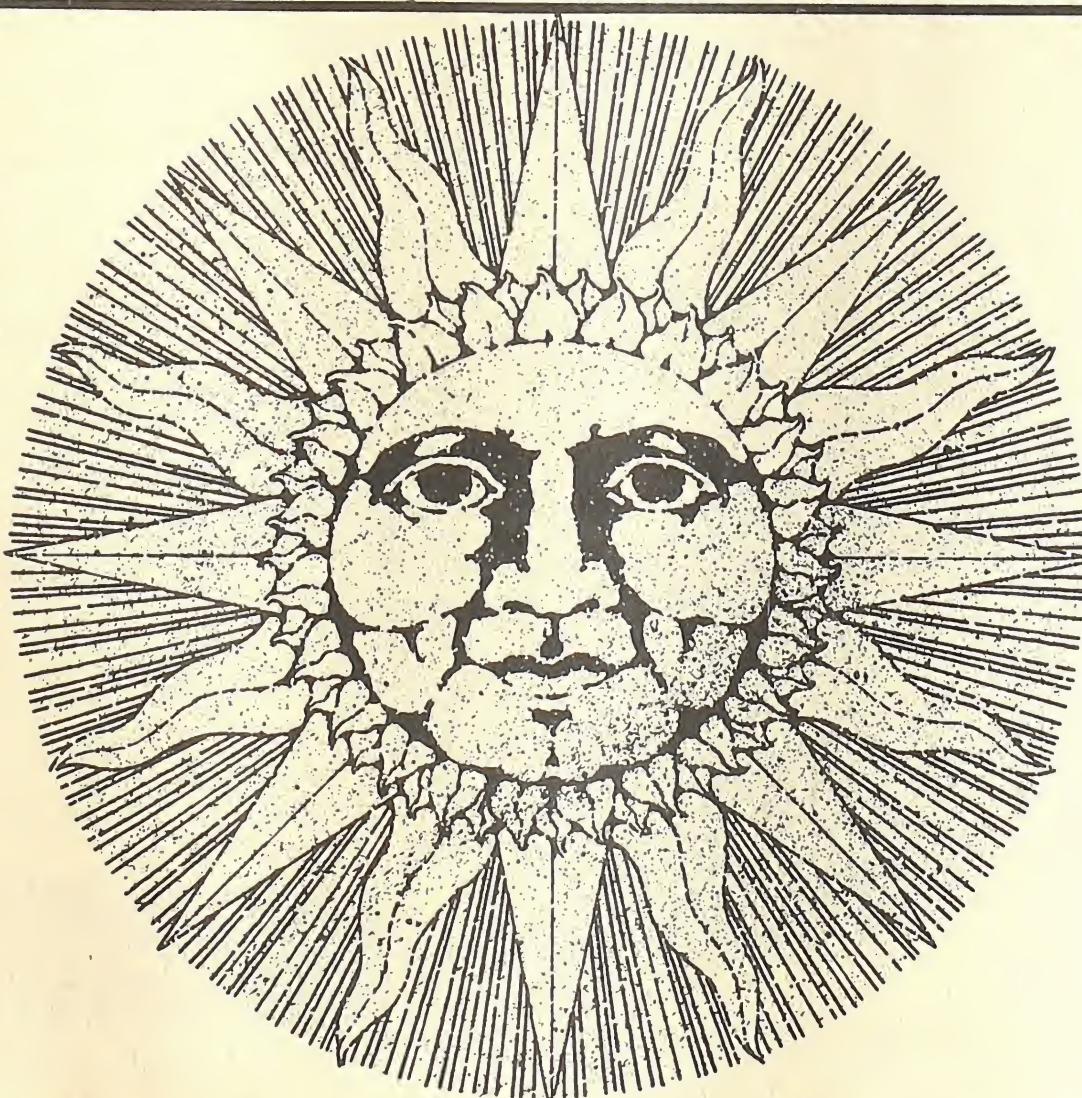

But, these villains need not be a problem, according to Vanessa L. Harris of the Wayne County Extension and Education Center, if proper covering and precautions are taken to prevent illness and damage to the body.

Heat stroke, heat exhaustion and heat cramps are the major heat-related illnesses, Harris said, and are especially prone to confront the elderly and very young. Elderly people may be prone to the illnesses because of the body's decreased mechanisms for coping with heat while infants are not yet adapted to abundant amounts of heat.

Heat stroke - the most dangerous heat-induced illness - requires immediate emergency medical attention, Harris said. Symptoms of the illness include body temperatures of 104 degrees or more, dizziness, faintness or loss of consciousness, hot, dry, red skin, staggering, possible diarrhea, rapid pulse, confusion and headache.

Harris explained that heat stroke is caused from a breakdown of the sweat glands and their inability to function. She said that immediate first aid can include the removal of as many clothes as possible and sponging the body with cool water. Liquids should only be given if the victim is conscious.

Heat exhaustion - the most common form of heat-related illness - is caused from too much exposure to high temperatures, Harris said. Symptoms include clammy or sweaty skin, slightly elevated body temperature, dizziness, profuse perspiration, rapid pulse, nausea and thirst.

For relief, Harris recommends the victim rest in a cool place and drink cool fluids to restore lost body water. He should then be covered with wet towels to lower the body temperature.

Heat cramps - the least serious illness but if untreated, can become serious - generally occur after much exercise or physical labor in the heat. Symptoms include sweaty skin, possible weakness and nausea, occasional tingling in the arms and legs and muscle cramps that often begin in the arms or legs. For first aid treatment, Harris said to have the victim sit or lie in a cool, shady place and drink cool fluids. A call to the physician should be made to see if the victim should take salt to replace body salt lost through perspiration.

Heat-related illness can be avoided, Harris explained, simply by using a few precautions. Among these are:

- Limit physical activities when the temperature reaches 90;
- Wear a hat, light clothing, light-colored, loose-fitting garments;
- Take frequent cool showers or baths or turn on the air conditioner or the electric fan;
- During the day, open windows on shaded sides of the home and close windows and drapes on the sunnier sides.

Summer fun abounds

While boating and skiing and fishing for walleye are undoubtedly thoughts that are sure to create pleasure in most everyone's mind, the convenience of water and a boat or some skis are quite often not as accessible for many city dwellers.

Not to fear say the coordinators of the various summer recreation programs in area communities which are varied enough to provide excitement for all age groups and an end to the inexcusable "summer doldrums."

While a list of each and every activity available and thing to do throughout the area would have one reading until summer no longer existed, a sampling of the various recreation department activities follows.

WAYNE - The fun squad program runs now through Aug. 8 at six parks in the city. Children ages 5 through 17 may participate in the activities at the parks including those in crafts, sporting events and field trips. Professional golf and tennis instruction is also available for a fee.

Parks included in the program are Rotary (Hunt), Jaycee, DeMario (Westwick), Taft, Civitans (Thinbark) and Kiwanis (Harroun).

For more information on other summer programs, stop in the Wayne Community Center, Howe Road at Annapolis, or call 721-7400.

WESTLAND - Summer bowling leagues are conducted each week at Fiesta Lanes. Leagues are open for adults, tiny tots, adult-youth and teens. Call Fiesta Lanes for information, 722-1450.

Tennis classes are offered Monday through Thursday at the Bailey Center, behind the Westland City Hall. Cost is $18 for youths and $22 for adults. Gymnastics courses are also offered for several skill levels each week. Fees vary per division.

For more information, call the department of parks and recreation at 722-7620.

INKSTER - Included in the summer activities are bike rodeos, table games, arts and crafts, educational activities, team and individual sports, Junior Olympics, field trips, softball and baseball.

Most events take place at the Inkster Recreation Complex, 2025 Middlebelt Road. The center is open 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, until 6 on Friday.

Free box lunches for kids are also available at Demby Center, Oakgrove Park, Westwood Park, Meek Elementary School and King Park.

Call 728-7530 for more information.

ROMULUS - Courses are being organized in aerobics, dance and gymnastics. Leagues are forming for a youth soccer league, golf, seniors sports events, as well as cheerleading and pom pon clinics.

Discount tickets are available for Boblo Island, Canada Wonderland, Cedar Point, Crossroads Village, the Detroit Zoo, Geuga Lake, Six Flags Great America, Greenfield Village, Kings Island, Mackinac State Parks, Sea World and the Michigan State Fair.

To call the recreation department, phone 941-0666.

Alternative sentencing: Prisoners receive a second chance

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

"When we say sentence, we think prison," according to Detroit Records Court Judge Robert L. Evans.

Because society thinks in those terms, the public does not seem open to programs that provide alternatives to prison sentencing, the judge told the participants of the Speaker's Conference on Crime Prevention in Romulus.

Alternative programs, he said, can be less expensive and more effective. These include jail release programs and many variations of probation and a new "tether" system whereby a bracelet or ankle will emit a warning if the person wearing it goes beyond a restricted area (their home, for example).

Alternative programs could focus on crime

be considered for non-violent offenders, he said.

"The alternative program have been criticized because people say we are taking a risk by not putting an offender in jail," Evans said. "We always take a risk. We risk every time we send someone to jail that he will turn out worse."

Representative Nick Ciarmataro of Roseville, another panelist, suggested that alternate methods of sentencing be considered since jail sentencing does not seem to rehabilitate.

Jeff Padden, public policy consultant and a former state representative, said alternative programs are less expensive and more effective than jail sentences.

Padden pointed out that it costs $60,000 per bed space to build a prison today. Some $10-million per year is spent annually on our prisons - a figure which Padden believes should prompt an investigation into more cost-effective programs for dealing with offenders.

"It is important to realize that not all offenders need to go to jail," Padden said. "Only those who are a threat to the public need to be jailed."

"They will come back to the streets at some point - an average term is 45 months," Padden said, "so we have to have a program that will prepare them to come back into society."

Among the alternatives to jail sentencing, he said, are community work programs in which the offender cleans up parks, fills pot holes or performs some other service which is economically beneficial to the community.

"This is the kind of program that can balance the scales of justice by allowing the offender to give something back to the community in repayment for what they have done."

"Work release programs are another alternative," Padden said. "This allows a person to continue working and supporting his family while paying a portion of his cost of punishment. He doesn't lose his job as he probably would if he served a prison sentence and thus has a better chance of remaining crime free at the end of his term."

In some alternative programs, there is restitution for the crime and/or fines, he said.

"Whatever alternatives are chosen, we have to be more creative," Padden said. "Plus, we need to be cost effective."

Padden said studies have shown that the number of people in the prison population has no impact on the crime rate. Prisons don't prevent crime, they only punish crime, he emphasized.

While there is a general belief that sentencing has become lighter in the past years, Padden said, there has actually been a doubling of the average time served in prison.

"In 1972, the average prisoner served 22 months. That figure is 45 months today," he said. "The result of the doubling of the sentence time is that the prison population has doubled."

Padden said the crime prevention conference allowed for an exchange of information between groups and individuals who may not have had an opportunity to exchange views in the past and presented a chance to "learn from each other."

"Crime levels are too high to be acceptable," Padden said. "That is why we need to work together to find new answers."

(We will conclude our Focus on Crime series in the next edition. Readers are invited to submit letters to the editor on the subject of crime prevention or to express their views on the programs which offer an alternative to jail sentencing for those convicted of non-violent crimes.)

Entertainers 'uncover' party excitement at ladies' night out

By JOAN MARY DYER
ANP Staff Writer

The "ladies night out" used to be highlighted by a double-feature movie, a game of bingo or, perhaps, a party promotion for plastic ware.

Today, the hottest entertainment item featured at gatherings of women is a male stripper - the gift that unwraps itself.

One of the entertainers who makes a successful living by being the surprise guest at birthday and bachelorette parties is Fred Dalton of Canton, a/k/a Steady Freddy.

Although most of his appearances are scheduled to entertain brides-to-be and birthday celebrators, Dalton has been the star act at bon voyage parties, anniversary celebrations and even baby showers. The typical honoree is in her mid-20's to early-30's, but Dalton has entertained women of all ages, including a 70-year-old woman "who loved it," he said.

Dalton considers himself more of a showman than a stripper because the ability to

"I concentrate on the role-play, acting and dancing to make my performance a good package."

act is an important part of his presentation. The most fun of the act, he said, is to catch the honoree unaware. He appears at the party as a well-dressed, conservative young man and - with the aid of some friendly conspirators - indicates to the guest of honor that they have met. As he begins his act, the music begins and the well-dressed young man dances out of his attire and ultimately is clad in a brief costume.

The male dancer has a variety of costumes including a boxer, baseball player, jogger, cowboy and is planning to add a law enforcement officer's garb to his wardrobe.

"Can you image the impact of an officer going into the house to tell the people they are making too much noise, and then going into the stripping act?" Dalton queried. Dalton described the difference in strippers as "movers and shakers" and dancers. He places himself in the dancer category since he spends a lot of time perfecting his routines and working on the choreography. Dalton plans to take classes in choreography to enhance his performances in the future.

"When I perform, I'm not provocative," Dalton said. "The act of stripping itself is provocative so I don't have to be. I concentrate on the role-play, acting and dancing to make my performance a good package."

Dalton has been performing for Strip-O-Gram and Lots of Fun for the past year. In that time, he said, he has built up a clientele of referrals who often ask for Steady Freddy to entertain at their upcoming parties.

The phenomenon of the popularity of male strippers is explained by Dalton as an offshoot of women's liberation. He believes women feel that as long as men go to shows to admire attractive women, they should have the same privilege of viewing men. Most of the party-goers enjoy the fun and entertainment, but a few get rowdy, he said. Dalton brings along a burly bodyguard to "stop any trouble before it starts."

Prior to beginning his new career, Dalton worked for a financial company in a "suit and tie" job. When the company's own financial picture took a bleak turn, Dalton decided to leave and try a new job. He looked through a stack of business cards and found one that a friend had given him several months before.

"I was in a bar dancing when a friend handed me a card and told me that I should check into the stripping act business. At that time, I wasn't interested at all, but I did save the card, and I thought it sounded like a good idea for a temporary job."

Since 25-year-old Dalton is aware that a dancer's career can't last forever, he is now working on his own business. He is in the process of setting up male fashion shows which will be presented at bars and restaurants.

When he's not working, exercising to keep in shape or planning his new venture, Dalton enjoys sports and movies.

Benefit to aid ailing infant

A series of benefits are being conducted in Westland to aid the infant daughter of former residents now living in Weatherford, Texas.

The fund-raisers are seeking to aid David and Tina Blankenship in their quest for $150,000 needed for a liver transplant for their 14-month-old daughter, Haley.

Haley was found to be suffering from biliary artesia, a severe liver disease, at the age of two weeks and a donor is being sought for a liver transplant.

Medical expenses were being covered by Medicare until a few weeks ago, according to a family spokesman. The benefits have run out and Blankenship is working on a part-time basis with no health insurance.

A spaghetti dinner and auction are scheduled between 2 and 7 p.m. July 20 at St. Simon and Jude Church in Westland. Cost of the dinner will be $5 for adults and $3 for children.

Individuals who want additional information on the spaghetti dinner or other fund-raisers scheduled in the coming weeks may call 595-7521 between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. daily.

Sea life

faring inexperience in more ways than one.

"I have a common statement to determine whether people are married or still going out. Before they get married, when they are putting the boat in the water it's 'honey, would you please get on this side of the boat.' After they get married it's a little more harsh," Gillespie explained.

"A lot of the time you'll see people have a friend or relative hold the rope of the boat and the person will just not let go," she further recalled of the observations of a marine owner. "The boat will take off and it will pull the person head-first right in the lake."

Even with such episodes and others that are sure to tickle the fancies of visitors to the Gillespie household, life at sea isn't always "smooth sailing." Indeed, life today for the members of the Gillespie family is drastically different from eight years ago in the city. But life today is a new challenge, a challenge that Gillespie feels provides excitement as she rides the waves of sea life finding new experiences along the way.

"I like to fish, I like to be outside. I really like living on the lake," Gillespie said. "I look back on when we first bought (the marina) and it was really a dilapidated place. There were 35 docks, most were a board and a tree stump. I think now we have 80-some docks."

"Sure, it's a lot of work. . . but there has never been a dull moment."

Even George couldn't lie about these cherry treats

By CHEF LARRY JANES
ANP Special Writer

Rumor has it that "Life is a bowl of cherries."

Personally speaking, nothing could be sweeter than sitting on a front porch on a steamy July afternoon, swinging back and forth on the glider with a big bowl of chilled cherries.

Remember cherry-pit spitting contests at the county fair? Never was any good. Guess it was the big buck teeth that blocked the velocity. Or whatever.

The production of sweet and black cherries this year will once again prove to be outstanding. Wish we could say the same about the tart cherries. Remember that spring thaw back in late February? Well, it fooled Mother Nature just enough. If that wasn't bad enough, late freezes that came into May certainly pounded in the final nail on the tart cherries coffin.

Okay, so the pie production this year will be seriously curtailed. With the lack of consuming those incredible double crust pies mama used to make, I won't have to hold my gut in at the beach. Not that cherries were ever to blame. A cup of sweet cherries, sans the pits (now I'm talking BIG ones here folks), tip the scales at about 100 calories. Needless to say, they're also chock full of vitamins and their delicate skins make them an excellent source of dietary fiber.

Since my call to Miss Manners has yet to be returned, let us now discuss how and where to remove the "pit." When using cherries for cooking purposes, it is proper to gently squeeze the pit out using your thumb and forefinger. If using this method however, be prepared to tell everyone you meet how your fingers got stained red for 10 days.

A remarkable device called the cherry pitter can be purchased from local cookware shops for about $15. This gadget works on the same principle as a paper punch. (Remember playing with those at school?) The cherry is placed individually on a small platform and by squeezing the handles together, a small cylindrical tube is pushed through the cherry forcing the pit out. Being the ultimate gadget freak, and purchasing one years ago, let me report that this process is not fun. If the cherries are too ripe, they literally are smashed to "smithe-reens." If that isn't enough to get you, I'm still wiping cherry juice stains from my kitchen wallpaper. I even put the dumb thing in my last three garage sales for 25 cents and no one would buy it.

Numerous cookbooks recommend pitting cherries with a straightened paper clip. You try fumbling with a straight paper clip with Playtex Living Gloves on and 12 pounds of cherries to pit. Trust me, it also is not fun. My secret solution to the magic of cherry pitting utilizes a well-known kitchen implement that makes the chore much easier and less messy.

First, you need a warm, summer afternoon, a tall glass of homemade lemonade and a swing on a front porch. Drape yourself with a red bath towel (the stains blend right in) and use a small, sharp paring knife. While doing this, I use the old "eat one, spit one, pit one" routine. The lemonade is handy when, by accident, you swallow a pit.

I couldn't finish this article without sharing a bit of old cherry folklore handed down from Grandma Janes' family cookbook that is kept in the old black suitcase behind the sewing machine in the china cabinet.

Grandma said that when working with cherries, soak them for one hour in the coldest water you can find. (I guess the ice man was scarce way back then.) By chilling the cherries before pitting and cooking, you will get less "bleeding" of the cherry juice. This is very important to people who want to make the juiciest cherry pie ever. Trust me, I tried it. Grandma knew what she was talking about.

Cherries can be frozen without syrup by placing the pitted cherries on a non-stick cookie sheet and placing them in the freezer until they are solid. Then repack as quickly as possible in freezer bags and label. A light syrup can be made using two cups of sugar to one quart water. Mix until the sugar dissolves. To improve color retention, mix in one teaspoon powdered ascorbic acid to every cup of sugar.

So you think you have the best recipe for a plain old double-crusted cherry pie? Send it to me in care of this newspaper. I'll print the best and the winner will get a copy of "The Cherry Cookbook" by Cindy and Jerome Rubin. Bon Appetit! Send those re-

with mixture. Chill.
Chef's secret: A pastry bag works great for filling the cherries!

MEATBALLS IN CHERRY SAUCE
(Makes 2 dozen)

- 2 dozen of your best homemade meatballs, precooked, drained
- 1 pound sweet cherries, pitted
- 2 tablespoons frozen orange juice concentrate
- 3 tablespoons brown sugar
- 3 tablespoons vinegar
- 3 tablespoons lemon juice
- dash Worcestershire
- a little fresh grated orange rind
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch

Place cooked meatballs in a saucepan. Combine remaining ingredients in a blender or processor and blend till smooth. Pour sauce over the meatballs and heat over medium heat, stirring occasionally for 10 minutes or till heated throughout and thickened. Serve hot with cocktail picks.

CHILLED CHERRY WINE SOUP

- 2 pounds cherries, pitted
- 2 cups water
- 1 small stick cinnamon
- 2 whole cloves
- dash salt (optional)
- 2 cups cheap red wine (dry or sweet)

- 1/4 cup brandy
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 3 egg yolks

Simmer cherries in the water with cinnamon and cloves and salt. When cherries are soft, rub through a sieve or colander. Combine juice-puree with wine, brandy and a little sugar to taste. Return to heat. Whisk in egg yolks quickly, allow to cook over low heat until slightly thickened. Serve chilled or hot.

CHERRIES JUBILEE

- 1/2 cup sugar
- dash salt
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1/2 cup water
- 1 pound cherries, pitted
- 1/2 cup brandy

Combine sugar, salt, corn starch and water. Add cherries, cook over medium heat, stirring constantly till thickened. Add all but 2 tablespoons of the brandy. Remove from heat. Ignite remaining brandy and pour into sauce. Allow the flame to burn out, stirring gently.

Chef's Secret: Cherries Jubilee is usually served over vanilla ice cream, however, try making the sauce and using it as a baste for chicken or duck, especially on the barbecue.

The silent type

Nice people sometimes get some very bad press. We've learned that in this business, and we've learned to try and swallow our personal feelings when reporting allegations aimed at someone we genuinely like and respect.

So it was these past two weeks when we reported the story of Mr. and Mrs. George Woodrow's eviction from their home in the Westwick Square Cooperative in Wayne.

The Woodrows installed a 20-foot, whip C.B. antenna at the co-operative, fully aware that such a device was prohibited by the by-laws of the co-operative. A long dispute raged, the members of the board of directors at the cooperative were finally forced to seek redress in the courts. The argument of the board, representing the numerous other residents at Westwick was a simple one: The antenna must come down or the Woodrows must leave.

The reasons for the ruling are also very simple, primarily, antennas of this type interfere with television reception, and, to some eyes, look unsightly. The Woodrows, all concerned will admit, were well aware of the regulation when they installed the antenna. The couple claimed the device was necessary to communicate with drivers who transport them.

Now, this seems like a simple case, very black and white. But the situation becomes clouded with emotion and sympathy when it is revealed that both Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow are blind.

The members of the cooperative board took the handicap of the Woodrows into consideration, and attempted to make a settlement with them, but the interference in television reception continued, as did the Woodrows' less-than-cooperative attitude.

In an attempt to publicize their plight, the Woodrows took aim at Ed Rowe, president of the board of directors at Westwick.

Ed Rowe is a fine man. We've known him for years, dealt with him on both a professional and personal basis and seen him in action serving as a councilman in the city of Wayne. He is dedicated to whatever he chooses to do, and he chooses to do a great deal. Ed's problem, in this situation, is that he is a gentleman.

When phoned for a comment on the Woodrow situation, Ed just said that he wasn't going to talk about it on the advice of his attorney--now, while from someone else that might seem arrogant and cold, knowing Ed Rowe, we understood that he meant he just felt that he could best serve the interests of everyone by keeping his mouth shut, not revealing the difficulties the Woodrows had created, not discussing the problems and unfounded personal attacks of George Woodrow, and not dignifying the situation with a response.

Ed Rowe is a man of good form and as well-mannered a gentleman as any of us will have the pleasure to deal with--but he made a mistake. While the writer of the accounts of the situation felt personally that Woodrow's accusations about Ed were unfounded and bizarre, he couldn't say so in the story. And when the story hit the front page of the Wayne Eagle, Ed came off sounding like the villain in the piece.

That's unfair. But Ed Rowe is the target of Woodrow's hostility, and he makes a fine mark. He's a prosperous, well-known businessman, he's a city council member, and he's gentleman enough to accept unfounded insult and accusation with grace and good form.

Ed takes a great deal of pride in the Westwick Co-operative, and when he begins to talk about his involvement with the board and the improvements at the facility, his dedication and sense of accomplishment are nearly tangible. Many, as Ed informed us, don't even know what a co-operative is.

But Ed Rowe, in his efforts to conduct himself as a gentleman, did come off in the accounts of this situation as the villain. By not defending himself against Woodrow's accusations of mistreatment, it appeared that Woodrow was the poor, handicapped, unemployed, persecuted victim of an unfeeling group of neighbors and a board of directors without hearts.

Perusing Ed Rowe's list of accomplishments as a public servant, and the amount of his life he has devoted to one altruistic or community project after another, nothing could be further from the truth.

Three courts of law have upheld the position of the board of directors and residents of Westwick Square--three judges have interpreted the situation and found the Woodrows' position untenable. Perhaps Ed Rowe thought that these opinions would override the emotion and sympathy all are bound to feel when hearing of the plight of this blind couple, and mitigate the subsequent accusations Woodrow heaps on Ed, who incidentally, is only one member of the board who made the decision to pursue this matter at the urging of the other Westwick residents.

Ed is a man who will weather this maelstrom with dignity and grace, as is his usual demeanor. But somehow, we just thought you ought to know that all the information wasn't in the story. And since Ed Rowe will never tell you what kind of man he is, we thought we would.

If there's a victim in this situation, it may not be George Woodrow.

A purrrfect stranger

She strolled into my office one day. Someone had left the door open, so she just walked in, making herself at home.

It had been raining, and she had gotten caught in the shower. Her coat was wet. At first I didn't see her. I was busy at my desk, deep in thought reading correspondence. Slowly and quietly, she moved across the room, undulating with feline grace.

Without a word she came around behind me, and brushed her young, warm, firm body against my leg. I was startled and shocked. As I turned, she spoke to me for the first time, in that tantalizing, seductive voice of her's that I have come to know so well. In her sweet, innocent tones, she purred. . . "Meow."

That was it. That's how Frances and I first became acquainted. At first I didn't know what to do. But then, after a moments' thought, it dawned on me. I would take her to the kitty guru. I would take her to my wife, Susan. Yeah, that's it!

With purring Frances under one arm, water and hair leaving her body and affixing itself to mine, I calmly walked to the office of the "Editress".

Susan was outside talking to Ray the "news guy," and to "John Dryer, star reporter," also known as Joan Dyer.

Usually not known for short sentences, I was in rare form on this occasion. In a sort of sweeping motion, I hefted Frances the feline up and sat her on the flat ledge that divides the cubicles in the palacious digs of our journalistic scholars.

Then I uttered one of the most eloquent declarative statements ever spoken by humankind. It said everything I had on my feeble little mind at that moment. I said, "Here," . . . and then I left.

Now you have to understand the nature of our staff. We had in the advertising department at one time, a pet turtle called Lou Grant. Lou was responsible for countless hours of conversation on a high intellectual plane. Our staff would discuss Lou's care and feeding, and speculate endlessly as to whether "Big Guy" would win, place, or show in the great turtle race. Lou went home for the weekend with a staffer one day, and decided they took better care of him.

We also had a goldfish in the editorial department named "Fluffy" a while ago. She stayed until her untimely demise, God rest her gills.

Then we, of course, have our trusted mascot and office guard dog "Ming." His sometime presence is oracled on my office door with the words, "Beware of Attack Shi Tzu."

Recently, we had as a part of our guest-for-the-day program, a rabbit by the name of "Betsy" who belongs to one of our staffers. And, now, here at last, we have been blessed with the presence of this four-legged feline seductress.

As best as I can reconstruct the scene, it

Double Burst

Looking at our future

It truly is an example of the American way of life.

While the celebration of our national birthday this past week was magnificent and the stirring unveiling of the statue of liberty an unforgettable experience, we have a exhibit locally that is also a true demonstration of America which is too often overlooked.

Perhaps not as public, and certainly on a much smaller scale, the Wayne County Fair often goes unrecognized as the true symbol of Americana that it is. For those unfamiliar with the fair, and many are, it will begin July 14 at the Fairgrounds located at I-94 and Quirk Road. The main participants and entrants in the fair are local youngsters, primarily members of 4-H Clubs, and many unaffiliated competitors.

The kids, aged 10 to 18 or so, bring their year-long projects to be judged. There are ducks, geese, cattle, swine, chickens, hamsters, guinea pigs, rabbits, horses, ponies and just about every other type of creature imaginable. They bring farm crops of all kinds, flowers, handicrafts and too many other items to list. But most of all, and probably most important, they bring a spirit of hard work, determination and success.

These contestants have worked hard, they have assumed a heavy responsibility and they are proud of what they have accomplished. The rules are strict, the competition fierce and the judges brook no nonsense. And the spirit of youth, the sense of pride and the look of accomplishment that these young people possess is truly worth more than any admission fee charged.

The fair board, 21 men and women who volunteer their time for nearly a year to prepare for the exhibition, also deserves the gratitude of those of us who may never see the fair and never think of participating. They deserve a vote of thanks for the opportunity they present to these young people, for the encouragement they offer by working to insure that there is a vehicle for this type of display and competition.

That sense of work ethic, of accomplishment and of success is nearly tangible at the Wayne County Fair. Here is a place to see the future of America first hand. Here are the young, the leaders of tomorrow and the custodians of the future of our way of life pursuing perfection in what they attempt to do. They are learning responsibility, achieving goals, learning fair play and most of all, finding the joy of success and the benefit of living where that opportunity is available to everyone.

The Wayne County Fair displays a lot more than farm animals and livestock and crafts. What you can see there is the real youth of America today learning to be the leaders of tomorrow. Don't miss it.

Inkster schools to get funding

INKSTER — An extra $1.5 million should be coming to the Inkster Public Schools district thanks to a recommended increase in the state aid payment, state Rep. William Keith announced last week.

The increase stems from the proposed addition of $28.6 million in state aid funding to local school districts by the state government. In addition to overall increases in state aid, the per-pupil guaranteed portion of the state monies a local school district can receive should be raised to $345 while the per-mill guaranteed payment should increase from $68.50 last year to $72.25 per mill this year.

The increases would add about $1,550,000 to the school district, about $516 more per pupil for every student enrolled in the Inkster school district.

Aside from general state aid increases, a $6.4 million statewide increase in transportation reimbursement was recommended for school districts as was another $11.4 million increase for special education programs and $1.4 million for gifted and talented programs.

Keith is the chairman of the state House Education Committee and was a member of the joint state House-Senate conference committee on state school aid which recommended the increases in state aid for the school districts.

Senate Bill 703, which authorizes the increases in state aid, has passed both the state House and Senate. It is now waiting for the signature of Gov. James Blanchard who is expected to sign it.

Registration continues

WAYNE-WESTLAND — Registration for fall classes in the William D. Ford Vocational/Technical Center for residents residing outside of the Wayne-Westland Community Schools district begins Thursday, July 10 and continues through July 24. Late registration must be completed by Aug. 31.

Those interested in enrolling should call 595-2135 for an appointment with one of the career counselors. Printing technology, computer programming, medical assistant, auto body, auto mechanics and photo typesetting are traditionally filed quickly, school district officials said.

Courses are open to high school graduates, G.E.D. holders, non-high school graduates and business and industry workers.

Olympians to compete

WAYNE/WESTLAND/CANTON — Local coaches participating in the Michigan Special Olympics program will travel to Central Michigan University Aug. 1 and 2 to take part in the Sixth Annual Coaches Training School.

The training is designed to better acquaint the volunteer coaches in dealing with mentally impaired individuals. Training school registration is $20 without housing or meals, $30 with Friday steak cook-out, or $60 with housing Friday night and meals.

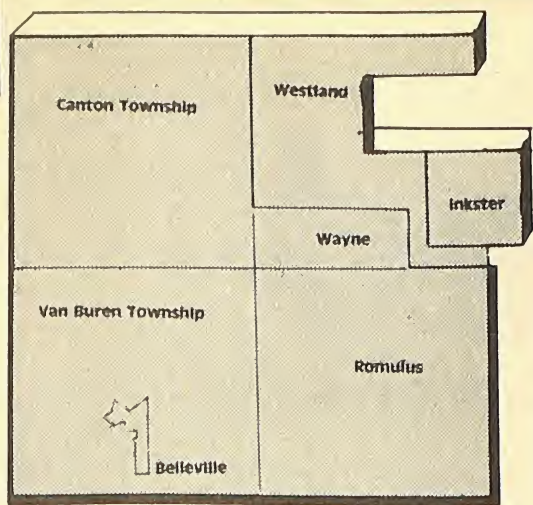

To become a Special Olympics coach or to participate in the training courses, call (517) 774-3911.

Program ends barriers

WAYNE — The Wayne County Intermediate School District will be among the local bodies administering education programs to help youth and adults overcome barriers to employment through customized vocational training, Barry Hawthorne, executive director of the Private Industry Corporation of Wayne County, announced recently.

Six programs have been recommended by the PIC for funding through the Michigan Department of Education.

If approved, the funds would allow the Intermediate School District to give vocational assessments, counseling, training and subsidized work experience for 100 handicapped in-school youth.

Wayne-Westland schools would be one site for the program offering courses for handicapped and dropout-prone youth and adults in individualized academic remedial training and vocation training in 20 occupational skill areas.

Other programs in language, continued education and training for GED exams and dental assistants will be offered in the Plymouth-Canton, Livonia and Garden City schools.

To learn how to be a part of the program, call 261-3420.

Post office open longer

WAYNE/WESTLAND — Hundreds of residents of the Wayne-Westland post office are taking advantage of the longer hours, Acting Postmaster John Shiven said recently.

The Wayne-Westland post office is one of several featuring extended lobby hours as part of a new effort of the postal service to be more customer-oriented.

The office, located at 6300 N. Wayne Road, Westland, is now open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:45 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturdays.

Area picked for survey

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Don't be surprised if the U.S. Census Bureau gives you a call later this month and asks if you have a job. They're not ready to offer you one if the answer is 'no' but, they will add you to their tally of unemployed people in the Detroit area.

The Census Bureau has chosen the Detroit area for a July 14 to 19 study which will be used to determine the national unemployment picture. Officials from the bureau reported that the surveys are being done via telephone and will be conducted at random.

While unemployment continues to be a problem in the nation and in Detroit with the latest figures in Detroit revealing that 9.6 percent of the population is out of work, the trend is toward an improved job-offerings outlook, according to Barry Hawthorne, executive director of the Wayne County Private Industry Corporation.

Hawthorne said that the unemployment rate for western Wayne County is currently rounding the 6.5 percent figure, down from 7 percent last year and 10.8 percent in 1983.

Hawthorne attributes the continued drop in unemployment in the area to the high number of people currently retiring from their jobs in western Wayne County. This trend, he said, is opening up the job market and allowing more workers better paying positions.

"We are becoming an older work force in this area. Things are looking up. The unemployment rate has dropped greatly even in the past year," Hawthorne said.

With the unemployment problem apparently gearing down, Hawthorne said he and his staff at the PIC, a corporation sponsored by business and government designed to provide job training and placement in unsubsidized jobs, are waging a new war against "underemployment."

The PIC director explained that while jobs are more plentiful, good-paying positions are not so easy to obtain. Stressing higher education and more hands-on experience in several fields, Hawthorne hopes the war against "underemployment" can take skilled professionals now working at minimum-wage jobs out of the fast food restaurant scene and place them into jobs that pay more than $5.50 per hour, the wage that Hawthorne said is the minimum a skilled professional should be making.

The following are the names of scholars in the primary department of the school who received a card of honor for the term ending July 2nd, 1886: Freddie Fehlig, Claude Plague, Robbie Plague, Bertie Smith, Eurotas Throop, Henry Loewer, Burton Cole, Burnis Cole, Mertie Howland, Vesta Coomer, Lee Miller, Lizzie Coy, Ettie Hayner, Kittie Plague, May Plague, Jennie Coleman, Ella Throop, Dora Sikes, Julie Hayden, Lottie M. Haak, Teacher.

Wayne's sensation is all over. Will Smith and Miss Emerson eloped two weeks ago - angry papa cut short blissful honeymoon, but since has extended clemency and with a God-bless-you-my-children has taken them to his heart and all is serene.

Romulus is booming her village lots at half price. Some of our citizens went down there and bargained for two lots. They were unable to change a $5 bill which they offered in payment for the lots and they came back disgusted.

Nearly a car-load of people went to Detroit Monday and one man fell behind and has not been heard from at this writing.

THE CLIMAX Fifteen Students Turned Out On The World. The Largest Class Ever Graduated From The B.H.S.

Last Friday evening was a time to long be remembered by seven ladies and eight gentlemen who were declared graduates of the Belleville High School. It being a pleasant evening, notwithstanding the heat, the M. E. Church was crowded to overflowing while not a few who could not get inside took up positions at the windows. First came the invocation by Rev. L.C. York which was followed by a well rendered quartette entitled "Friendship, Love and Song" and was followed by the Class History by F. W. Haak.

took, oh, 10-20 seconds after my departure from the editorial department before our staff had voted to adopt this calico tigris as our "official office cat."

She was soon presented with an official key to the office, genuine cat dishes were acquired, a bed was made, and cat food was purchased, and "Voila," we have a new member of our office family.

But wait. A cat must have a name?! All of our other four-legged and finned friends had names! After countless moments of research and voting, the tally came in. Early election figures from some of the outlying departments where polls close early proved to be correct. The name of Frances had taken it.

She has now been with us for several days. She sleeps, at times, on the upholstered chair in my office, or sometimes on the couch in the front hallway, to the amazement and amusement of passers by. She usually, however, can be found lying in her bed in the receivables department or catching a bite to eat in with the reporters.

Frances also enjoys hopping up on the desk of the switchboard operator and parading around for the possible admiration, attention, and petting of waiting visitors and customers.

I'm not quite sure where Frances came from, or how long she'll decide to stay. But I can tell you, that she has already won the hearts of most who inhabit our facility.

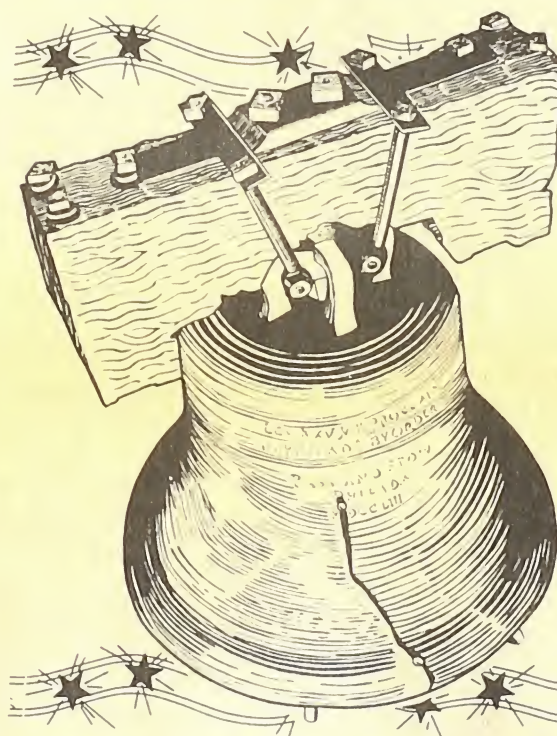

We can learn a lot about people through animals. Often we see who would help those who are more vulnerable to the harsh realities of life than themselves, or who would run roughshod over them in an act of superiority, by showing their inferiority.

You can see those who have closed themselves off from the hurt of other people, open up and smile to the attention of a cuddly, furry pet.

We tend to have a love-hate relationship with our animal friends, just as we do with people. Yet the creatures that we share this planet with, through some miracle of creation, have a place in God's plan just as we do. They should be protected and attended. From them, and the simplicity of their existence, perhaps we can re-learn what many have forgotten, . . . that a loving touch, a hug, and the warmth and attention of others is as essential to our emotional and physical well being, as it is the well being of fluffy creatures such as Frances.

I'm glad Frances came to town, and I hope she decides to stick around.

Frances and I will see you next week.

His goal: Play in Olympics

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Dreams come true if you work to make them a reality. And a 15-year-old Romulus hockey player has taken a giant step toward making one of his dreams come true - to play on a U.S. Olympic hockey club - by receiving an invitation to participate in an Olympic training camp. Alex Bossory, who is the regular goalie for the Data Vision team of St. Clair Shores, left for the Olympic training camp on Saturday. His destination is Colorado Springs, Colorado where some of the finest young talent in the nation will gather under the watchful eyes of nationally-recognized coaches. The tryouts will help coaches identify the best and tag them as future Olympians. Bossory was excited about the trip and the recognition he has received. "My coach informed me

When it comes to tending goal, Romulus's Alex Bossory is considered among the best in the state. He's been invited to take part in a U.S. Olympic training camp which began Monday in Colorado Springs.

that I was chosen to take part in the camp," Alex said, "and I really am looking forward to it". Alex will spend a week in Colorado and his training will include fundamentals as well as scrimmages. A goalie who helped lead the Falcons to the state finals, Bossory also sports a 3.5 academic average and will be a junior at Romulus High this fall. In a letter from Falcon Bantam Major Club Coach Jan Fox, noted: "I have observed your play for the past couple of years and I have come to the conclusion that you are one of the few goaltenders in the Michigan National Hockey League who is capable of keeping a team in a game even when the team is playing poorly. Your past coaches have said that you are as popular with your teammates as you are talented. This combination of qualities would make you the No. 1 draft pick if there was such a draft on the bantam level." For the past eight years, since he was seven-years-old, Alex has been playing hockey. He chose the goalie position "because of the challenge." That challenge cost him his share of facial scars, remembering that he "once took a puck between the helmet and the mask," however, "I'm not scared of pucks," Bossory continued.

"It's all part of the game." Quickness and ability to see a play develop are among his greatest assets, according to his coaches, who believe that Alex Bossory will be around a long time. "You are among the best at your position if not the best..." Coach Fox's letter to Alex points out. Alex has had a taste of international competition and has come away liking it. He took part in an invitational at Quebec three years ago, and made a return trip to Ottawa to play against the best of Canada. His team also plans to take part in a post-Christmas tournament this year in Finland.

Top state softball clubs are slated to play in Wayne

Some of the top men's softball teams in the state will see action during the 10th annual Leonard J. Anderson Memorial Invitational, scheduled for three days, beginning July 25 in Wayne. "Each year this tournament gets better and better," said Larry Quartuccio, tournament manager. "In the past we have had world-class softball teams compete in this classic." Quartuccio said that the format, as in the past, is a two-loss elimination tournament, however, if it should rain it may go to a one-game elimination. "This year's tournament is a USSSA sponsored one, so all teams will be USSSA sanctioned," said Quartuccio. Sponsor awards will be presented to the teams finishing first, second and third, while there will be individual awards to members of teams finishing first and second. Those needing further information should contact Quartuccio at 522-1505 or 721-7400.

Van Buren Lions win soccer cup

The Lions, representing the Van Buren Soccer Association, captured the Great Lakes Soccer Association second flight cup for boys in the nine and under age division. Sweeping three crucial games in the playoffs, the Lions disposed of the Dearborn Heights' Stingers 5-1 to claim the championship. The champs had to erase Garden City United (4-0) and the Dearborn Heights Comets (7-1) before reaching the final round of the three-game "sudden death" elimination tournament.

It's the last call for area golfers City championship tourney deadline is Monday

If you're going to compete in the 27th annual City Championship Golf Tournament, you have until 5 p.m. Monday to get your entry form and the $30 entry fee to The Associated Newspapers offices. That's the deadline for the tourney scheduled to be played Saturday and Sunday, July 19-20, at Hilltop Golf Course in Plymouth Township. "Although I don't have a running tally on the number of people signed up to date, I feel we are way ahead of last year's pace," said Bill Hawley, tournament director. "Those wishing to participate in the two-day tournament should get their registration fees in before the deadline." The tournament is sponsored by the parks and recreation departments of the participating communities and The Associated Newspapers. The competition is open to all male amateur golfers in the cities of Wayne, Westland, Romulus, Inkster, Garden City and Canton Township. Golfers will be competing for city titles, berths on their city's team that will be competing in the state parks and recreation tournament later this year and trophies. Trophies will be presented to the first, second and third place finishers in the championship flights. Additional flights will be organized only if the number of entries from an individual city (or township) warrants it. There will also be a trophy awarded to the medalist (low scorer) for the entire field.

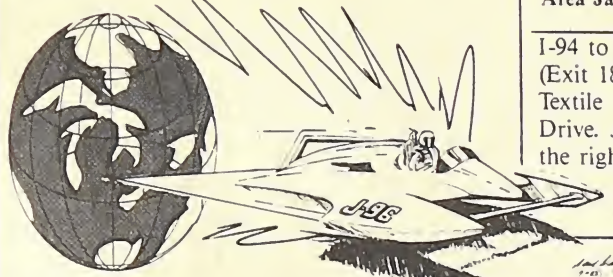

In case of a tie for one of the trophies, a "sudden death" playoff will be waged between the competitors scoring the identical scores. Golfers can look forward to playing 18-holes on Saturday (July 19), then coming back on Sunday (July 20) for the final round. (Tee times will be published in all editions of The Associated Newspapers the week of the tournament). There is a $30 entry fee that covers the two-day cost of golfing and trophies. Checks (or money orders) should be made out to BILL HAWLEY, tournament director. Golfers should mail (or drop off) their check, along with the entry blank accompanying this story, to The Associated Newspapers, 35440 Michigan Avenue, Wayne, MI 48184. Soccer champs

The finals were marked by near-perfect passing on the Lions and aggressive play by the forwards. The Stingers' offense was frustrated at every turn by the Lions whose goalies, Ron Buhro and Jason Garland, proved to be more than a match for the few shots taken on goal by the Stingers.

The Lions took the lead early in the first quarter with goals by left wing Malon Kilkenny and center midfielder, Erik Szyndlar, and never looked back.

Kilkenny and Szyndlar repeated their performances in the second quarter giving the Lions a 4-0 lead at the half. Center forward Shea Travis scored goal number five in the third quarter on an assist by right wing Ryan LaVacque making the score 5-0 after three quarters of play.

The Stingers averted the shutout with a final quarter score.

Flat Rock revs up for international race

Drivers from eight states have filed early entries for the International Motor Contest Association (IMCA) modified national series race scheduled for Saturday, July 12 at Flat Rock Speedway.

IMCA national series point leader Dude Thompson of Huxley, Iowa, and 11-time Flat Rock Speedway track champion Joy Fair of Pontiac, head up the entry list, which includes drivers from Iowa, Illinois, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Oklahoma and Wisconsin.

Fair, who began his career in the 1950s in open wheel modifieds, will be at the wheel of an '86 Chevrolet Celebrity IMCA ride fielded by Iowan Tom Herbert.

It marks the first-ever appearance for the IMCA mod-ifieds in Michigan, with a 24-car starting field expected for the 30-lap feature event at Flat Rock. The IMCA modifieds will race Friday night at Merritt Speedway in Lake City, Saturday at Flat Rock and Sunday at Spartan Speedway in Lansing.

Faulhaber charges $24 for the first day the sign is placed on the lawn and $5 for each additional day, or $39 for an entire week. Keeping them coming back

Demmer reveals secret of customer satisfaction

By RAY DAY
ANP News Editor

Customers at Jack Demmer Ford in Wayne are driving away happy and are keeping that contented attitude some 30 months after buying their new vehicle. That's the word from a report by the Ford Quality Commitment-Performance program which recently placed the dealership among the very highest program performers in the district.

The program is conducted company-wide with the Demmer dealership grouped with 39 other dealerships in the metro Detroit area. Surveys are sent to customers 30 days and 12 months after buying a new vehicle, surveys which ask the customer to rate the dealership on quality of the vehicle, sale of the car, followup service and other aspects Ford feels is pertinent to future car sales.

Demmer received a 6.84 rating out of a possible 10, a considerably commendable feat, according to Ford officials. One spokesman for the company said the dealership has been placing second and third in the surveys compared to the other 39 dealers in the Detroit district since the program was started last fall.

But surveys and a commitment to customer satisfaction are nothing new to the 39-year-old dealership, according to owner Jack Demmer. Demmer reported that surveys have always been given to customers after each visit to the service department, surveys that have

"Really what all this means is that you have satisfied customers. That's what keeps you going," said Demmer. "I think the biggest thing we do is keep the people who are employed here customer-oriented. Taking care of the customer is the most important thing we do and we are here to listen to them."

Demmer said that the key to customer satisfaction is in the employees. While the quality of the product, its performance and reliability are assuredly key factors in customer satisfaction, Demmer said that the employees in a business have to know how keep the customers content as well.

Thus, the 98 employees at Demmer Ford are all carefully monitored to make sure they fit into the Demmer atmosphere of togetherness and the "customer comes first" attitude. Demmer said that among car dealerships in the area, his Ford dealership has about the lowest employee turnover rate around.

"We are really proud of the people we have. We all have a cooperative attitude," Demmer explained. "We try to keep a good atmosphere with everybody. We don't penalize if we make a mistake . . . we are all human and we all do make mistakes."

And what do contented employees produce? Satisfied customers. Demmer said, the key to success in most every business.

"Our goal is to keep our customers satisfied," Demmer said. "That's what really has kept us in this business and helped us survive 1980 and '81. The thing that really makes me proud is that this has been an ongoing goal (customer satisfaction) - we haven't really changed."

Romulus firm on 'Michigan 100' list

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Michigan Business Magazine recently selected the top 100 privately owned firms in the state, and Horizons Unlimited, Inc. or Romulus found itself on the prestigious list.

The fabricating company, which has doubled its workforce and revenues during the past five years, placed 87th on the list, due primarily to the phenomenal growth of the company.

Businesses were required to meet three primary qualifications for inclusion on the list including providing a five-year operating sales history, being a privately held corporation partnership headquartered in Michigan and to have sales ranging from $100,000 to $1 million in 1981.

Horizons Unlimited easily met these requirements with total sales or revenues in 1981 of $9.6 million. Reported sales during 1985 were $22.4 million.

The workforce expanded from 84 full-time employees in 1981 to 204 in 1985. The company has been privately owned since it was founded in 1943 by Ray Palmer and at that time called Lincoln Park Screw Machine located on Fort Street.

Today his son Ron Palmer is the owner, chief executive and president. The younger Palmer joined the company in 1971 and bought it in 1976. Under his direction and leadership the company changed names and broadened its own horizons.

"Annual sales were $215,000 when I started with the company," said Palmer, a graduate of Michigan Technical University with a degree in engineering management and administration.

"This year we expect to hit $30 million. When I started in 1971 there were eight employees. Now there are 250," he said.

Horizons Unlimited manufactures metal fasteners at four plants: two in Romulus, one in Taylor and one in Allentown, Pa.

"Ninety percent of our business is automotive related. We manufacture many specialized fasteners. Anything that's metal of a diameter between 2 3/8 to 12-inches long, we can build it," Palmer emphasized.

The company even manufactures many different sockets for Craftsman of Sears and Roebuck Company.

Palmer attributes the company solvency and success to control and communication between his staff, suppliers and customers.

"We maintain better control when we service everything ourselves and outsource as little as possible. Competition has been fierce. We used to compete with 70 companies. Only three remain now.

There are 300 plants in the Detroit area that provide a similar service and product," he noted.

"You have to wear a lot of hats in a small company. I can do everything from engineering and sales to marketing and personnel. They call it a 'ratchet head,' he joked.

Horizons Unlimited belongs to the holding company of Horizon Enterprises. Other subsidiaries are Heat Technologies and Old Hawthorne Properties. All are located in the Downriver area.

"Downriver is really catching fire. There's a different atmosphere here. Things are changing and I hope it continues," Palmer said.

Money supply definition unclear

The Fed is having a difficult time sorting out a definition for the current "M's". With the gradual elimination of non-transactional accounts, the significance of M-1, M-2, and M-3 has been blurred. The next meeting of the Fed Open Market Committee may begin to address this problem, but a quick fix is probably not available. It may be necessary to develop an M-4, or discontinue the use of percentages in favor of ratios. The last possibility is to scrap the whole system, and design a new set of measurements.

As economic activity continues to be flat, the money multiplier continues to increase. It would appear most consumers have fulfilled most of their expectations, or are not in a hurry to do so. The build-up of funds on deposits at major banks is a major reason rates continue to decline. Gold and silver continue to be out of favor.

For this week, the short-term traders are reluctant to buy, but are more reluctant to sell. Intermediate and long-term traders see some value on being on the buy side. Their focus will be on issues will improving fundamentals, and issues with a possibility of taking advantage of lower interest rates.

For this week, the market has increased optimism for lower interest rates. They see two possibilities: (1) the banking system will be forced to reduce the spread between the "prime", and the "discount rate" to stimulate demand, or (2) the Fed will disregard the growth of M-1, and lower the discount rate in the hope of stimulating the economy. I believe the former is more likely than the latter.

During this period of uncertainty, most traders will hold their present positions.

NOTE: The U.S. trade deficit totaled $14.21 billion in May, including the first agricultural deficit in 20 years; New-home sales tumbled 11.6 percent in May, the biggest drop in over two years; Leading indicators rose a slim .2 percent and factory orders fell .1 percent in May; The Dow Jones Average over 1900.
